Republicans Meet At Saratoga, Bid For Dewey Strong

Each Delegation Brings More Aid for Manhattan Prosecutor—Remainder of Ticket Tentative

Bontecou Listed

Poughkeepsian May Run as Lieutenant Governor; Desmond, Wagner Named

Saratoga Springs, N. , Sept. 27 (AP).—"Dewey for governor" echoed through corridors today as New York Republicans assembled to nominate a ticket which they hope will return the party to state government control for the first time since 1922.

Each county delegation arriving for the convention opening tomorrow brought increased support for Manhattan's 36-year-old prosecutor, Thomas E. Dewey.

With the top place apparently settled, in view of the almost unanimous Dewey sentiment and absence of word from the prosecutor that he would not be available for the nomination, Republican chieftains sat down to select the remainder of a ticket from these possibilities:

Lieutenant governor—State Senator Frederic H. Bontecou, Poughkeepsie; State Assemblyman James J. Wadsworth of Livingston county, son of Rep. James W. Wadsworth, a former United States Senator; State Senator Thomas C. Desmond, Newburgh.

Attorney general—Alfred L. Simon, Saratoga county district attorney and president of the State Young Republican Clubs; State Senator Benjamin Feinberg, Plattsburg; Frank G. Raichle, Buffalo, special prosecutor in a recent Buffalo municipal investigation.

Comptroller—State Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat, New York city; Deputy State Comptroller Charles H. Mullens, Albany.

Two United States Senators and two Representatives-at-large will also be chosen.

Dewey supporters already claimed the votes of Erie county's 127 delegates, Westchester's 114 and 126 from seven counties composing the third judicial district—Albany (43), Columbia (11), Greene (8), Rensselaer (29), Schoharie (7), Sullivan (9), and Ulster (19).

A majority of the 1,936 votes, or 969, are necessary for nomination.

Young Republicans of the state are pledged to support the prosecutor.

The only name frequently mentioned in connection with the gubernatorial nomination, in event Dewey should decline to accept, is that of Rep. Bruce Barton of New York, who will "keynote" the convention. Assembly Speaker Oswald D. Heck, Schenectady, will be permanent chairman.

State Chairman William S. Murray called a meeting of the state committee's executive group for late in the day to discuss the state ticket, the platform and other convention details.

A serious issue appeared in the making between New York city Republicans and those from upstate areas over expected efforts to obtain American Labor Party indorsement in New York city for the party's candidates. Conservative upstate members are strongly opposed to any such move.

Mentioned most frequently as possible nominees for the two-year United States Senate term were Jerome D. Barnum and Edward H. Butler, Syracuse and Buffalo publishers, respectively; former State Senator George R. Fearon and Mayor Rolland B. Marvin, both of Syracuse.

Edward F. Corsi, deputy commissioner of public welfare in New York city, was considered the most likely choice for the six-year term.

Held for Reckless Driving

Harry S. Miller of 59 Henry street, was arrested Monday evening by Herbert Behrman of Washington avenue, who charged Miller with reckless driving, following a collision between their automobiles. The hearing will be held later in police court.

Thomas O'Hara of 26 Lafayette avenue was fined $2 for driving past a red traffic light at Washington and Lewis avenues on Monday.

He has been on the staff of the International Committee in China since 1909 and since 1936 he has been working with the association in Nanking. He served from 1928 to 1936 as general secretary of the Foreign "Y" in Shanghai.

The public is cordially invited to attend the lecture which promises to be instructive and entertaining.

Government Gives Out Cash to Rush Hurricane Relief

Discovery of Bodies Sends New England's Toll Today to 478—Red Cross Plans Aid for 60,000 Families

Boston, Sept. 27 (AP)—The federal government opened its purse strings wide today to help New England recover from what WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins called "the worst hurricane disaster in any region of our country."

Discovery of nearly a score more bodies in Rhode Island sent the six-state list of known dead in New England to 478 as Hopkins announced he was "cutting red tape" to permit each state administrator to allocate funds to projects without further administration approval.

"Any one of them will be able to do anything I could do," he explained, adding that more than 100,000 WPA men already were at work.

As the death toll continued to rise, the Red Cross announced it expected to aid 60,000 families. One of the greatest tasks, officials said, was rehabilitation of Connecticut and Rhode Island fishermen who lost not only boats but homes and livelihood. Fishermen were busy yesterday and today attempting to find the wrecks and salvage motors and other equipment.

The relief task was hampered by failing telephone communication. The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company reported 44 communities still were cut off and 185,000 telephones were out of order. Two thousand linemen were on hand from as far away as Virginia.

Railroad service remained uncertain.

At Hartford, Conn., Governor Wilbur L. Cross summoned municipal officials to an emergency conference at the state capitol today to map a program of relief and restoration in Connecticut's flood and hurricane damaged areas.

Chancellor Hitler Replies to Roosevelt Today Saying He Shares President's Views Regarding Consequences of European War; President, Cabinet Discuss Crisis

'No Comment'

President Studies Hitler's Reply—Cabinet to Listen to Chamberlain Speech

Washington, Sept. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt studied today, preliminary to this afternoon's cabinet session, Adolf Hitler's reply to his recent note urging peace on European nations.

Hitler's reply was received at the White House late last night, translated immediately and read by the President.

Stephen Early, White House secretary, said there was no comment on it.

This afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt and his cabinet were expected to listen to a broadcast from London by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Other business on cabinet meeting schedule included relief for victims of the North Atlantic coast storm. Mr. Roosevelt has asked Harry L. Hopkins, the works progress administrator, for a complete report on damage rehabilitation needs there.

As to the foreign situation, Early reported the President now is working on an "hour-to-hour" basis in his study of the foreign situation. Secretary of State Hull was one of his midday callers.

Early said the President had not determined whether he would be able to make a scheduled visit to his Hyde Park, N. Y., home this week.

That war would affect all sections of American economy and raise innumerable legal and international problems has been accepted generally.

President Roosevelt warned the people of this country, in his peace appeal yesterday to the leaders of Germany, Czechoslovakia, Britain and France, that:

"In the event of a general war they (the American people) face the fact that no nation can escape some measure of the consequences of such a world catastrophe."

The President had ready to lay before the Cabinet the three enthusiastic replies to his peace message received from President Benes of Czechoslovakia and Premiers Chamberlain of Great Britain and Daladier of France and Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

Hitler's reply, a day later than the others, came today.

In it, the Reichsfuehrer agreed that the effects of war would be devastating, expressed appreciation of Mr. Roosevelt's "high-minded intentions," and then set forth his thesis that if war did come, it would not be the fault of Germany.

Hitler apparently drafted the message after his radio speech yesterday, in which he bitterly attacked President Benes of Czechoslovakia. Some officials here believed the attack would have been even sharper had Hitler not been handed the President's appeal before he began speaking.

Benes' reply to the President said:

"I believe that even today the dispute could be settled without resort to force."

Although the President's message was dispatched originally only to Germany, Czechoslovakia, Great Britain and France, Secretary Hull later instructed American representatives to give copies of it to the Hungarian and Polish governments also.

Hitler's speech was followed by

Refuses Blame

Fuehrer Says He and German People Have Tried to Make Peace Possible

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler today replied to President Roosevelt's appeal for European peace with the assertion that "I completely and in every way share your views concerning the immeasurable consequences of a European war."

"Be assured that I thoroughly appreciate the highminded intentions underlying your argument," the Reichsfuehrer telegraphed in response to the message Roosevelt sent yesterday to the leaders of Germany, Czechoslovakia, Britain and France.

Roosevelt appealed for continuance of peaceful negotiations in an effort to solve the Czechoslovak crisis and avoid war.

"For that very reason," said the chancellor after his reference to the "immeasurable consequences" of such a conflict, "I can and must decline every responsibility of the German people and its leadership if, contrary to all my efforts to date, further developments should actually lead to an outbreak of hostilities.

Origin of Problem

"In order to form correct judgment concerning the Sudetic problem now under discussion it is indispensable to direct thoughts to events in which in the last analysis the origin of these problems and their dangers are rooted.

"The German people in the year 1918 put down their arms in the faith that the conclusion of peace with the opponents at that time would bring a realization of the principles and ideals which were solemnly proclaimed by President Wilson and just as solemnly accepted by all the powers at war as binding upon them.

"Never in history has the faith of the people been more disgracefully betrayed than happened then and the conditions of peace forced upon the vanquished nations in the suburbs of Paris (Versailles) has fulfilled none of the promises given

"On the contrary they created a political regime in Europe that reduced the vanquished nations to pariahs, stripped of all rights, and that was recognized from the beginning by all judicious persons as untenable.

"One of the points which most clearly revealed the character of the dictates of 1919 was the founding of the Czechoslovak state and the fixing of its boundaries without in any way taking into account history and nationality.

"Sudetenland, too, was included in it, although this region has always been German and although its inhabitants unanimously declared their desire for anschluss (union) with the German Reich after the destruction of the Hapsburg monarchy.

Self-Determination Denied

"Thus the right of self-determination that was proclaimed by President Wilson as the most important foundation for national life was simply denied the Sudeten Germans.

"But that was not enough.

"In the treaties of 1919 certain obligations, which according to their wording were very far-going, were imposed upon the Czechoslovak state as regards the German racial element.

"From the very beginning these obligations were not kept.

'Time Has Come to Talk Business'

Beneath a swastika-emblazoned German eagle, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany told a war-tense world from Berlin: "The time has come to talk business. The Sudetenland is the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe, but it is a demand from which I never will recede." This picture was radioed directly from Berlin to the United States.

Minister to London Says Demands 'Unconditionally Unacceptable' to Prague

(Part of Prime Minister Chamberlain's radio speech to the world today will be found on page 2.)

(By The Associated Press)

The government radio in Prague today broadcast indignantly that Hitler's demands showed "a brutal desire to crush Czechoslovakia as a free state."

The Prague broadcast, made about the same time Czechoslovakia's note refusing Hitler's latest demands was made public in London, declared that if the fuehrer's demands were met "Czechoslovakia would be so weakened in a military way that the greatest part of her territory, notably Bohemia and Moravia, would be at the mercy of Germany."

Some quarters saw new hope of a peaceful solution in a visit by Sir Horace Wilson, close adviser to British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, to Hitler in Berlin—a meeting which fulfilled the hope expressed by President Roosevelt that negotiations would not be broken off.

Both Germany and the little central European republic, however, appeared to be sticking firmly to positions which held the dangers of a general European conflict and caused Europe to rush war preparations at top speed.

London ordered her two deepest subway stations, in the heart of the city, closed for transformation into air raid shelters.

The British army in Palestine and British forces throughout the near and middle east prepared to defend the empire's vital life lines in event of a general conflict.

Czechoslovakia's minister to London, Jan Masaryk, made public the note handed the British government Sunday, declaring Adolf Hitler's latest demands "unconditionally unacceptable" in their present form and promising the "utmost resistance."

The German chancellor's newspaper, on the other hand, said Hitler's speech last night was "the last word spoken by Germany in this conflict."

In that speech, Hitler demanded that Czechoslovakia cede Sudetenland to Germany by October 1 and asserted that this was "a demand on which I will not yield."

British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain planned to broadcast an appeal for peace at 8 p. m. (2 p. m. E. S. T.) tonight from the cabinet room at 10 Downing street.

"I cannot abandon by peace efforts," Chamberlain said.

Britain already had given an authoritative warning, however, that "Great Britain and Russia will stand by France, "who is bound by treaty to aid Czechoslovakia against attack."

In Geneva Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Russia's commissar of foreign affairs, was reported to have proposed a mighty, three-power military demonstration in the hope that a show of force by Russia, Britain and France would avert war.

Political quarters in Berlin attempted to discredit the British warning by declaring it did not come "from authoritative, official circles" and said France was relieved of any obligation to aid Czechoslovakia because Prague was refusing to keep an earlier promise to cede certain areas to Germany.

There was no official comment in Prague on Hitler's speech, but the government studied it and conferred with France and Britain to determine whether a basis existed for further negotiations.

In Paris sources close to the French government said France had answered the German chancellor's threat against Czechoslovakia last night by calling additional troops to the colors.

The French cabinet met this morning for an hour and 20 minutes, but officials would not say

Walter Whipple Injured on Cycle

Following Accident to Jansen Avenue Boy, Chief of Police Issues Statement

Walter Whipple, 14, of 131 Jansen avenue, was injured about 5:40 o'clock Monday afternoon when the bicycle he was riding was in collision with a truck of Livingston & LeFever of Field Court, driven by Kenneth Herdman of 35 Snyder avenue.

The boy was rushed to the Kingston Hospital where it was found that he had sustained lacerations, abrasions and contusions.

Mr. Herdman in reporting the accident to the police said that he was turning the truck into Grand street from Broadway when the bicycle struck the rear end of the truck.

Whipple was the 15th bicyclist to be injured so far this year.

Following the accident Chief of Police J. Allan Wood issued the following statement:

LaGuardia Mobilizes 800 Sanitation Trucks For Emergency Needs

New York's Mayor Mans City Equipment to Prevent Any Possible Halt in Rush of Aid to New England

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia's compromise proposal for settlement of the strike of 15,000 truck drivers was accepted by the strikers at noon today at a meeting in Mecca Temple. The truck owners rejected the proposal yesterday.

The mayor's compromise agreement calls for a two-year contract establishing a 44-hour week with no reduction in the present weekly base pay of $44 to $56.50. The old contract, which provided for a 47-hour week, expired September 1. The strikers, members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, have asked for a 40-hour week without pay reduction.

About 4,000 strikers attended the meeting at which the mayor explained the situation and his desire to bring a speedy end to the strike which has crippled city-wide freight transportation.

Earlier Mobilization

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Determined on immediate settlement of a strike of 15,000 truck drivers, Mayor LaGuardia today mobilized 800 city sanitation trucks for "emergency purposes if necessary."

The trucks, manned by city employes, were parked near city hall for further orders, strikers and truck owners split over an "ultimatum" proposal advanced by the mayor to end a walkout tying up commercial shipping in the metropolitan area.

Nearly Million Railroaders Committed To Strike; Roosevelt Intercession Seen

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP)—Nearly a million railroad workers—from section hands to streamliner engineers—were committed today to a nationwide strike this weekend but presidential intercession, postponing the walkout, was considered imminent.

The strike was ordered to combat a 15 per cent pay cut. Deadlines were fixed late yesterday by the chieftains of 19 rail brotherhoods after tabulation of a strike poll.

The zero hour for 750,000 employes in 15 unions constituting the Railway Labor Executives Association was 6 p. m., Friday, September 30. The 150,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen were ordered to quit work at 12:01 a. m., Saturday.

All of the nation's major railroads were involved in the dispute.

George Harrison, chairman of the association, and President A. F. Whitney of the Railway Trainmen's Union, reported the workers overwhelmingly in favor of a strike.

President Roosevelt has already indicated that he would appoint a factfinding commission to study the dispute and make recommendations.

Under the Railway Labor Act such action would automatically postpone a walkout and would maintain existing wage scales for a 60 day period. Hence, the status quo apparently will remain until December 1.

Harrison stated a strike was the only recourse unless the carriers backed down on their demands. If workers contented to the pay cut, estimated at $250,000,000 a year, it would, said Harrison, "put not only a gross injustice to themselves but also a wrong to the social and economic life of the country." He said business levels do not justify a cut in wages.

E. A. Enochs, spokesman for the carriers, termed the strike vote "a vote for a paper strike" to precipitate appointment of a presidential commission. The vote, he said, was a strategem "to strengthen the hands" of the union leaders and was not an indication of the workers' sentiment for a "real strike."

Chamberlain Tells World How British Stand in Crisis

London, Sept. 27 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain tonight addressed to the world a statement of Britain's position in the face of the war threat confronting the powers of Europe.

He told the world:

"Tomorrow parliament is going to meet and I shall be making a first statement on the events which have led up to the present critical situation. An earlier statement would have been impossible while I was flying backwards and forwards across Europe and the position was changing from hour to hour.

"But today there is a lull for a brief time and I want to say a few words to you men and women of Britain and perhaps to others as well...

"I have done all that one man can do to halt this war.

Prime Minister Chamberlain declared he would not hesitate to take a third trip to Germany if he thought it would do any good, but at the moment "I can see nothing further that I can usefully do in the way of mediation."

"Tomorrow I shall be making a full statement of events which led up to the anxious present situation," Chamberlain said.

"I thank those who have written to my wife and myself.

"It has been heart-breaking to me when they thought too soon that the danger of war was past.

"How horribly incredible that we should be digging trenches and trying on gas masks because of a quarrel which is taking place in a far away country.

"It seems still more impossible that a quarrel that is already settled in principle should be a subject of war.

"I can well understand the reasons why the Czech government have felt unable to accept the terms which have been put to them in the German memorandum.

"Yet I believe, after my talks with Herr Hitler, that it ought to be possible to arrange for transferring the territory that the Czech government has agreed to give to Germany by agreement under conditions which would insure fair treatment to the population concerned."

"If I were convinced that any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by force I should not hesitate to resist it," the prime minister declared in a broadcast from famed 10 Downing Street.

"But I shall not give up my hope for a peaceful solution."

whether any momentous decisions were taken. Some sources predicted a special meeting of parliament might be called.

The British parliament has been recalled to meet tomorrow.

Britain prepared for the greatest defense in her history. Workmen toiled throughout the night digging bomb defense trenches in parks and vacant lots, while troops rolled away to their guns on the coast. Trucks rushed through London distributing gas masks and policemen went from door to door with instructions as to how to darken windows in air raid black-outs.

The London stock exchange was placed under rigid restrictions to prevent war panic and the Bank of France raised its discount rate from two and one-half to three per cent as a result of the international crisis.

Only from Yugoslavia and Italy was there any signs of optimism. High Fascists in Rome stressed that they considered Hitler's speech moderate and that they saw in it a hope that war might be avoided. Foreign office circles in Belgrade said they saw "peaceful" tones in the fuehrer's address.

The United States embassy to London today urged Americans all over Europe "to arrange to return to the United States" if they could do so.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Utilities, Rails, Industrials Down

The market fluctuated yesterday with European news continuing to exert a dominating influence. On the New York Stock Exchange industrial issues opened up over two and half points under Saturday's close, as measured in the Dow-Jones averages. At noon averages showed a loss of 4.64 points. As Chancellor Hitler began his speech before a huge meeting in Berlin the market was showing a stronger tendency, but sold off irregularly toward the close, which came before the speech was finished. For the day industrials showed an average loss of 3.11 points, about a point above the day's low, closing at 129.91. During the day they made new low levels for the current move. Rails were off 1.31 points for the day, to 23.03; utilities declined 0.34 point, to 17.49. Total transactions was 1,230,000 shares.

Foreign markets closed before the Hitler speech and were down sharply. London Times average showed industrials down 4.4 points and rails off 1.7 points, both making new lows for the year. Paris was lower. Brussel's market was swept by a selling wave and at the opening in certain departments there were declines of from 10 to 20 per cent; control committee decided to allow no prices to be quoted for securities showing abnormal decline. Berlin Boerse opened weak, but strengthened with some securities higher than Saturday's close. Lloyds announced new war risks rates on shipping in most cases double those of last week. There was a virtual collapse in the foreign exchange market, with sterling showing the widest break in the two years of the tripartite pact.

In this country commodities were generally lower with the exception of wheat and sugar. Wheat at Chicago was up 1⅝ cents a bushel and 2⅞ at Winnipeg. Sugar was up as much as four points. Cotton, cocoa, rubber and hides were down.

Foreign bonds were under pressure. Italian government 7s dropped 16¼ points. Australian issues lost as much as 10 points.

Steel operations for the week beginning September 26 are scheduled at 46.7 per cent of capacity, a decrease from last week, when operations were at 47.3 per cent of capacity.

It is estimated that American Can's net for 1938 will be more than enough to cover the regular $4 common dividend rate. Dollar sales so far this year have been about seven per cent below 1937 period, but a better showing is looked for during the latter part of the year.

Negotiations for purchase by the city of Memphis of the electric properties of Memphis Power and Light Co. have been indefinitely suspended. Company offered properties to city for $16,410,419, but city would pay but $13,000,000. President Sawyer of National Power and Light refused the city's offer.

Gas line demand for 1938 may establish a record. For the first seven months of the year consumption, including exports, totaled 320,422,000 barrels, an increase of 1.8 per cent over the same period in 1937, when the total was 314,645,000 barrels.

It is estimated that the N. Y., New Haven & Hartford R. R. suffered loss in damage to road and equipment, by reason of the recent floods, which exceed the loss in the March, 1936 floods, when the total was between $750,000 and $1,000,000.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Selected stocks did a quiet comeback in today's market as war tension lessened a shade.

Steels, motors, rubbers and specialties attracted followings for advances running to around 2 or more points at the best.

Top gains, established in the forenoon, were reduced in many cases near the final hour. The activity was only about one-half that of Monday, with transfers at the rate of approximately 600,000 shares.

Despite the critical situation abroad, Wall Street seemed to feel the door was still open for negotiations between Germany and Czechoslovakia on the Sudetenland and that the stiffer attitude of Great Britain and France might obviate a general outbreak of hostilities.

Bonds were ragged but with much less weakness than in the preceding season. Major commodities, including war-inspired grains, pointed downward.

The London official stock market closed weak. Stocks improved in Berlin and Amsterdam and dropped at Paris. Sterling and the French franc did better in terms of the dollar after hitting new lows for the move in initial transactions.

Lacking rising steam were American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, N. Y. Central, Sears Roebuck and J. C. Penney.

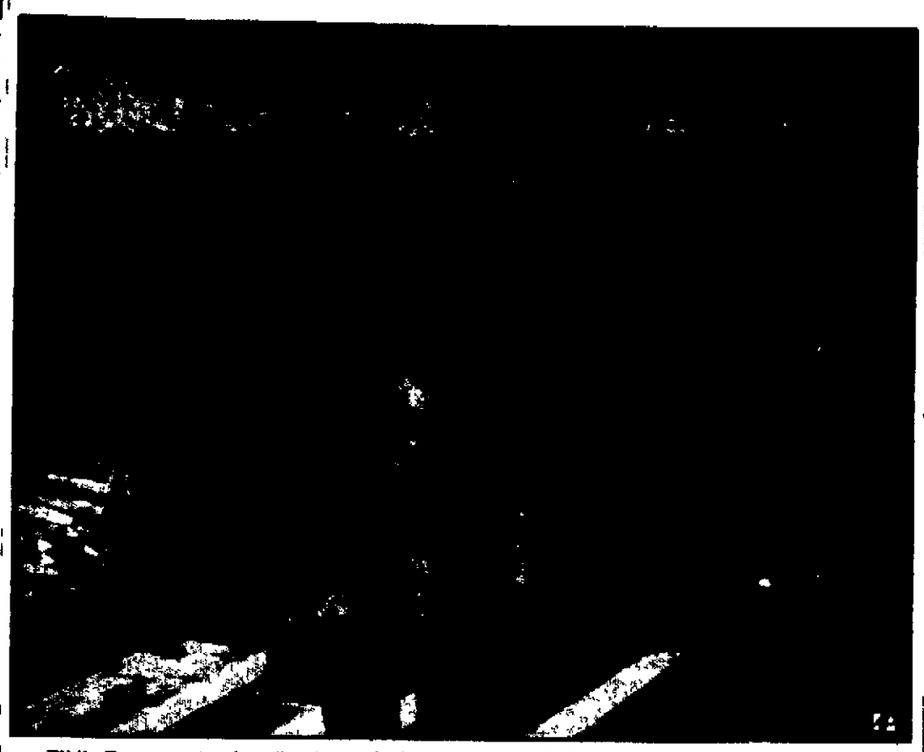
GAS AND BOMB SHELTER IN LONDON'S HYDE PARK



While Europe teetered perilously on the brink of war and Chancellor Hitler addressed the whole reich by radio, workmen in London's Hyde Park rushed completion of this shelter against possible gas and bomb raids. Such shelters, being built in London by the scores, are intended as emergency protection for civilians who cannot flee to the countryside.

Mrs. Searing Has Praise for City's Hurricane Crews

Experiences typical to many local residents during the storm of last Wednesday are described in a letter to The Freeman by Annie E. P. Searing of 142 Pearl street, who thanks the city officials and various workmen for their respective parts in the work of restoration.

The letter follows

"Editor, The Freeman,

Dear Editor:

"Last Wednesday's storm destroyed in my little garden, within less than 20 minutes, the work of nearly 20 years When at the climax of the chaos one of the giant trees crashed over on the roof hurling a large chimney down on the living room floor, we gave up, thinking the end had come.

"I ran to the telephone just before it faded out and put in three S.O S calls. the Mayor's office, the Chief of Police and the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company. Within five minutes more we found ourselves on that possible desert island of these mechanized modern times. No light, no heat, no current, no telephone. What a night!

"With food in the house, plenty of candles and one small open fire, we pulled through. One member of the family plugged in her electric pad, when she got into bed and wondered why it gave no heat.

"Morning showed us our fantastic desolation, but the sun was out and so were the boys The street was full of men. All night they had been chopping, sawing, hoisting great chunks of wood on the big derricks and calling orders. Their voices out in the darkness was comforting

"We made up our minds to a week, at least, of going in and out under a blanket of trees—no hope ahead. And then what happened! Big gangs of men came and took over our 'case' Like magic they solved it The same chopping, sawing and hoisting went on The four big street trees were lifted up off our grounds, wires in the street were untangled and adjusted and by Friday night the main job was done By Saturday night, we had light, heat and telephone.

"Sitting here on Sunday afternoon, looking across at the fence, rescued in part and piled up, the shrubs in tatters or flat, four street trees gone and the place where the chimney was, covered with a great patch, things look as though we had just moved in But a drive through our streets this morning showed the same fine efficiency everywhere. I know I am voicing a universal thankfulness to our various agencies of resuce when I here express my gratitude to all who helped me; to the officials whose courtesy and patience met the appeals; the Mayor's office, the Chief of Police office, the electric light company, the telephone company and the W.P A, who have cooperated in a work of restoration that cannot be excelled anywhere in our land.

"Thank God we live in a country where humanitarian effort unites us all.

HELPING THE RED CROSS

As the full toll of the hurricane that lashed the northeastern part of the country became known to other sections, millions of Americans turned from the tragedy abroad to the tragedy at home. Here, however, the death and destruction were created by natural forces, not by man turning against his fellow man. And here, too, sympathy and courage rose at once to start the work of relief and reconstruction.

Every thoughtful American must feel deeply thankful that the country is always prepared to set its relief army to work at the first sign of trouble. Through its own nationally supported agent, the American Red Cross, the country can send clothes, medicine, doctors, nurses, food and all necessary supplies and workers to the scene of any disaster. Membership dues gladly contributed to the Red Cross yearly by millions of Americans take care of most needs. In the far-reaching emergency caused by the recent hurricane, additional funds are needed and will be forthcoming from sympathetic and generous Americans.

Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, general chairman of the Ulster County Chapter of the American Red Cross, received a telegram last week stating that the Red Cross has rushed to the aid of stricken humanity in Long Island and Connecticut. The local chapter would appreciate any financial aid that citizens of Kingston and Ulster county may be able to give. Contributions will be received at the Red Cross office, 260 Fair street.

Other local chapters of the Red Cross throughout the country, now asking for fresh funds, will find the money pouring in. There is tremendous satisfaction in contributing the means for such human work.

THE HAYDN QUARTET

A string quartet was on the air on Friday afternoon, September 23. It was playing Haydn. Every music lover knows what the Haydn quartets are like—music never very deep, but brightly cheerful, always delightful. They were after-dinner music composed for the salon of Prince Esterhazy, whose eighteenth century guests sometimes listened with attention and sometimes accepted the music as a pleasant background for the party, much as they accepted the flowers and furniture.

Every few minutes the music of Papa Haydn was interrupted. The crest of the river had passed Hartford. The list of New England dead had crossed the 500 mark. The minuet began. The conference between Hitler and Chamberlain had been reported broken off. The minuet proceeded. Agreement was reported from Godesberg. What kind of agreement was not stated. The lovely tinkling movement was heard. The competent and understanding voice of H. V. Kaltenborn told of the massing troops on many frontiers, of Daladier's word that France would keep her agreement, that Russia would support France, that Britain felt that everything that could have been done to ensure peace had been done. There is no war—yet—said Mr. Kaltenborn. The Haydn movement came to its end.

Wild winds, and shattering floods, and the fires of war, and soft, sweet music.

Life is like that. Perhaps the human heart may be thankful that along with war and wounds and disasters music can still be heard.

PATENT LAW PROBLEMS

Proposals that the American patent laws be revised are attended with charges that some useful patents in recent years have been suppressed and withheld from commercial application for selfish reasons. The American Chemical Society now asks its members to report all such suppressions.

"This is a matter of great importance to the American people," says the secretary of the society, "and if the rumors are true they should be informed thereof." All facts gathered will be presented to the Congressional committees on patents when they begin to consider basic changes in the patent laws.

One of the suggested changes aimed at alleged suppression of patents would limit to five years the absolute monopoly now granted for 17 years. At the end of the period, if the holder has refused to develop his patent for practical use, compulsory licensing would follow.

Many people have thought the charges of patent suppression were much exaggerated. The truth needs to be known, one way or the other, and the patent laws need to be examined and brought up to date in the light of present conditions and future needs.

American children are supposed to be pretty democratic, but we heard of one the other day who announced that he was "going totalitarian," so he could tell the other kids where to get off and they couldn't talk back.

Collective bargaining is said to work in England "because it is an accepted fact." All they have to argue about over there is the terms.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

PAIN IN LOWER BACK

During the first part of a medical course the student is taught all about bones and joints—how they get their names, their uses, and other information. A little later he learns about the bloodvessels and nerves. About the middle of the course or perhaps sooner, he turns his mind almost completely away from bones and joints as he studies closely other parts of the body—brain, heart, lungs, kidneys, bloodvessels, ear, nose, and throat—the chemistry of tissues and fluids, normal and abnormal conditions of the body, public health, hygiene, general medicine and surgery, women's diseases, childbirth, infant feeding, legal medicine, and other branches or departments. This means, in a great many cases, that physicians forget about bones and joints, thinking of them only as a framework to support the real body.

As a matter of fact about the bones themselves and where bones meet—joints—there may be conditions causing pain not only at the joints themselves but in the adjoining or surrounding parts—muscles and nerves.

An example of how many physicians forget or ignore the bones and joints is found in many cases of low back pain. Dr. B. S Troedsson, in Archives of Physical Therapy, reports a number of cases of low back pain due to a slight misplacement or derangement of the last bone of the spinal column and the central bone below it which rests between the two hip bones, at the back. In these cases there is a history of sudden pain in lower back following exertion or work done in a stooping position The patient is unable to bend over

What has happened in many cases is that there has been a slight slip in one or both of the joints which hold these two bones (last spine bone and middle hip bone) together.

Instead of just resting the patient, Dr Troedsson recommends a simple method of putting the bones back into their right relationship. The patient is put flat on his back on a solid table and asked to brace himself. The operator stands at the foot of the table and with a firm grasp around one of the patient's ankles, bends the patient's knee down on the abdomen. Then the patient is told to give a violent kick. As the patient kicks, the operator makes a sudden strong pull on the ankle. After a number of these kicks it usually will be found that the patient can now bend forward toward his toes with little or no pain.

THE CLOUDED MOON

Chapter 44

Into The Fiery Furnace

WE CARRIED Noah More out and laid him on the scorched grass under the orange trees, and he lay there like a dead thing, eyes closed, breathing hardly perceptible. Fleuriot dropped on one knee beside him, struck a match, and raised an eyelid.

He turned to Dunning. "Go then to the house, my friend, and see if you can find some brandy."

"See here, man!" said Hugo harshly. "Why all the anxiety about bringing this vermin round? Don't you realize that Miss Wills is in deadly peril, and a minute's delay may mean life or death to her?"

The man from Marseille looked up at him. "My friend," he answered gently, "This Auberge des Allouettes is probably some small unknown inn and without the help of this wretched clod we may never find it."

Dunning had been fumbling in the pocket of his white coat, and now produced a serviceable-looking flask.

I bent over Fleuriot's shoulder, holding my breath, as I watched the still, putty-colored face on the ground, and gradually it seemed to me that a faint tinge of color spread over it. The eyes opened, staring straight upwards at the night sky and the riding moon, and suddenly there came a cough, a choking convulsion, and Noah More sat up and stared about him. He pushed the dank hair from his forehead and then suddenly gave a hoarse cry.

"They shan't get me!" he gasped. "I won't be caught!"

"Steady friend," I said. "Get a grip on yourself. No one's going to hurt you." But a gesture from Fleuriot silenced me.

"There is more here than fear of the police," he murmured, and then to the vagrant: "Who is it, then, that you fear?"

The tattered object gave him a swift, sideways glance His eyes were wild, his fingers plucked and twisted at his tattered shirt.

"I don't know," he said, scarcely above a whisper. "I can't think. My brain—there's something the matter with my brain." And then, with a swift, crafty look: "And why should I tell you? If you are the police, you have nothing against me."

"You're perfectly right, Mr. Noah More," I retorted. "The police have nothing against you, but I wouldn't say as much for the Club des Sans Clubs."

He gaped at me, his jaw dropped, and his face contorted, and then suddenly he threw back his head and screamed.

"You see," I said, while Fleuriot swore softly to himself, "we know all about it, but if you help us, I guarantee that the police will look after you until all danger is past. You saw something last night in the villa of Monsieur Geiss, didn't you?"

He stared up at me with wild, terrified eyes. "I did not see, but I heard and I guessed," he muttered.

"Just so," said I, "you guessed that Geiss had killed Miss Adams, and I think you taxed him with it, to get money from him before he fled."

To Grips With The Fire

HE PASSED a long, bony hand across his eyes. "I knew that it was the end of everything," he said. "The Club des Sans Clubs was finished; Geiss was on the run. When I asked him to settle up, he laughed at me and told me it was cheaper and safer for him to report me to the club as a traitor who must be exterminated." He smiled, a wry, drawn smile, and for a moment I saw a shadow of the man he must once have been. "I cannot blame him," he admitted, "for it was his life against mine. He knew I could testify that he had killed that woman, but he knew too that the club would kill first and ask questions afterwards, if once he said the word. That club—" he shuddered. "You do not know what it is!"

"Listen, man, you know where this Auberge des Allouettes is?" I asked.

He nodded. "But you will never get there," he said. "Geiss might have got through this morning, but now the place must be a red hell."

"Not half as ruddy as we'll make it when we get there," I retorted. "Come on, you've got to show us the way." With Hugo gripping him by the other arm, we half-dragged half-carried him up the steps and across the terrace, and in another minute we were packing ourselves into the Hispano.

Dunning, by virtue of his weight, took the place beside Hugo, while Fleuriot and I settled ourselves in the tonneau with the bony form of Noah More wedged between us, and as we swung out of the lane and whizzed off along the highroad, I turned curiously to the vagrant.

"One thing," I said, "before life gets too full for words—do you happen to know just how Geiss got hold of Miss Wills?"

He turned soulless, lack-luster eyes towards me. "It was easy," he answered in his toneless voice. "There is a chambermaid in the Carlton who is a member of the club. Geiss knew that Miss Wills had been absent from the hotel all night, and he instructed this woman to wait in the corridor until she returned and tell her that, by her uncle's orders, her room had been changed to one at the back. She accepted this without question, and once she was inside the room, we seized her, gagged her, and led her down the fire-escape at the back to the lane where Geiss's car was waiting. She fought," he added, with a wan grimace, "but Geiss threatened her with a revolver and forced her to do what we wanted."

We had been running straight towards the cape, with the sea on one hand, redly illumined by the reflection from the flaming cape, and on the other quiet, dusky slopes of woodland, but now we had come into the main street of a village. Here, for the first time, we came to grips with the fire, for though the place itself was untouched it was brightly lit; every inhabitant was out in the street, talking, gesticulating, or standing in frightened, silent groups, watching the rim of flame that danced along the crest of the ridge above, threatened every moment to sweep over and come crackling down through the pine trees towards us.

Death To Venture Further

THERE were troops too, infantry of the line and Chasseurs Alpins, shirt-sleeved and tin-hatted, grimed to the eyes; some lying prostrate by the roadside, sleeping the sleep of utter exhaustion, others refreshed, piling into lorries to return once more to the fruitless struggle. Fleuriot called to a young lieutenant, whose red-rimmed eyes looked glazed with weariness, and after a minute's whispered conversation the lad scribbled something on a card and handed it to him. "Our passport," he explained, as we crawled forward at snail's pace, hooting our way through a mob of people. "The cape is in the hands of the military, and after Le Trayas the road will be closed—even to me, unless we have permission."

We came to Le Trayas, where the thoroughfare was a milling mob of frightened, hysterical people and where bayoneted sentries at the further end barred all egress. But the lieutenant's card was a magic token and we sailed through.

The fire might have been a hundred miles away, for the brows of the hills shut off the fiery glow, but suddenly, rounding the bend, we came full into an inferno of blinding, glaring heat. A wind like the opening of an oven door struck at our faces; glowing sparks bit at our naked arms and faces, and our eyes were blinded by the fierce glare of light from a valley of sheer flame, lying directly below us Troops were hacking away the undergrowth, felling trees.

Straight ahead a tall fellow that I took to be an officer raised a warning hand, checking our progress.

"Out of the question," he said sharply, as Fleuriot bent and whispered to him. "The valley is impassable. I can let no one through."

Fleuriot turned quickly to Noah More. "Is there any other way to the inn?" he demanded, and the scarecrow shook his head.

"There is no other way," he muttered. "It is the right-hand fork at the bottom of the valley that runs up to the hills."

Again the detective leaned out, whispering, and this time I fancied that he told something of our errand, for the officer gave us a curious, commiserating look as he slowly shook his head.

"It would be death to venture farther," he said. "I feel for you, messieurs, but one can only hope that the fire has not yet reached the inn. If it escapes during the night by tomorrow it may be possible to get through."

Fleuriot looked at me. "You hear?" he said, but there was more inquiry than resignation in his tone, and even as he spoke, Hugo swung round; his face, illumined by the ruddy glow, showed hard and drawn and his jaw was set. "You others must do as you please," said he, "but for myself, I'm going through."

Fleuriot gave a short cackle of satisfaction. "You see," he murmured regretfully. "We are willing to take the risk, and the responsibility is not yours, for I am an officer of the law, in pursuit of a dangerous madman who is also a murderer, and these gentlemen are, for the moment, my assistants. I fear that, in this case, my authority overrides yours."

The other hesitated for a moment, and then his hard, smoke-grimed face broke into a smile. "I compliment your courage, messieurs," said he, "and I wish you luck!"

At a word of command from him men came running with wet cloths which we wrapped round our faces, leaving only the eyes and nostrils free, and at the last moment some inventive genius dashed up from the cottage with a water-soaked sheet which we bound about the radiator of the car. In an instant we were off, shooting down the long, curving slope, straight into the fiery furnace below.

DUMMY'S STILL IN THERE—FIGHTING!

By BRESSLER

Washington Daybook

By FRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—If a general war engulfs Europe, the important historical question of its exact opening date may never be answered.

Will history say it began with Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia or Hitler's occupation of the Rhineland in 1936? Franco's challenge to loyalist Spain in that same year? Hitler's occupation of Austria in 1938? Or some memorable date like Chamberlain's visit to Hitler?

The historian's problem arises from that strange practice . . . shoot first, and declare war when it suits, if at all.

Until the turn of the century, a declaration of war was a patriotic thrill. In ancient Rome they gave themselves over to a complete enjoyment of histrionics before the opposing armies fell on each other.

War After Dinner

EMISSARIES of war were given honor. Great public spectacles greeted them. Plenty of banqueting intervened before the head emissary unruffled his toga and politely declared his host was a pain in the neck. Then everybody went home to buckle on his sword.

Today China and Japan are locked in a war a year old, and neither has hinted a declaration of war ever will be made.

In the past half century, the advent of modern war machinery had the effect of outmoding the practice of declaring war. The nation taking the offensive found it almost necessary to surprise the enemy.

Probably the last great war which was formally declared all along the line before hostilities began was the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. Both armies waited for a declaration of war Even so, the German general staff had gone so far as to map out its mobilizations and army movements in advance. Germany won, by and large, because of advance preparation.

Then Came The Maine

IN OUR own Spanish-American war in 1898 congress was caught off base by the sinking of the Maine, and was forced to content itself with recognizing on August 25 that a state of war had existed for four days. In this country, congress has to make it legal.

The next big conflagration was the Russo-Japanese war of 1905. A strategic naval battle had been fought and won by Japan's heroic Admiral Togo two days before war was declared.

The World war was little different. True, Austria declared war on Serbia. But the great powers were hiding their strategy and declarations would have given them away. The German army invaded Luxemburg two days before a declaration of war against France.

When we entered the World war, congress had a difficult time making up its mind, and when it did, on April 6, 1917, the lawmakers decided to recognize the existence of a war that Germany had started against the United States months before.

This change in custom has played havoc with international law built up through centuries. A country declaring war is supposed to have certain belligerent rights, such as legal blockades, and the like. Neutrals have certain rights of free passage on high seas. A violator of these rights is supposed to be subject to damages.

Modern practices seem to have scrambled all that, despite Secretary of State Hull's appeal to reason and lawful procedure. The big objective of a war-bent nation today is always concealed, every invasion must appear to be a defense of national honor.

Sundown Stories

—By Mary Graham Bonner—

The Surprise

"THREE cheers for the red, white and blue,
Three cheers, Christopher, here's to you,
Three cheers for the red, white and blue,
Three cheers, Christopher, here's to you."
So sang Christopher in his cawing voice, and the Puddle Muddlers were puzzled.

"Hurry, hurry," cried Willy Nilly.

"I'm hurrying," he cawed once again. But now he stood before them.

"Christopher—" they gasped. "Is it—really—you?"

"What have you been doing?" asked Willy Nilly.

"Decorating myself for the autumn season," cawed Christopher. "Full of color like the trees."

"But the trees aren't red, white and blue," cackled Top Notch.

"Some of them are red," cawed Christopher. "Besides it is fine to wear red, white and blue colors. It's like celebrating a holiday."

"This isn't a holiday, though," cackled Top Notch. "You should have fixed yourself up like that for the Fourth of July."

"Don't you think I'm handsome?" asked Christopher.

"You're an extraordinary sight," quacked Mrs. Quacko.

The little ducklings were gathered around Christopher and now they became spotted with paint.

"You're spoiling my good paint job," cawed Christopher. "I was smooth and even before," but he did not really mind. They had seen him when he had first arrived with his red wing, his blue wing and his white body.

"If there was paint to be found you'd find it," sighed Willy Nilly.

Tomorrow—"Removing The Paint"

Meaning of Name Blanche

The name Blanche, of Teutonic-Latin origin, while not entirely inappropriate for a very white-skinned brunette, should as a rule be given only to blonde girls, for it means "white, or fair." It is a beautiful name, suggestive of refinement and daintiness, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Blanche of Castile (1187-1252), daughter of a king of Castile and granddaughter of a king of England, married Louis VIII of France and was regent after his death. She also acted as regent later while her son, Louis IX, was away on a crusade. She was a strong ruler, curbing revolts and limiting encroaching powers of the church.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 56—"William Cook"

The steamer "William Cook" was built at Hoboken, New Jersey, in 1865. It was a wooden-hull steamboat powered by the engine from the steamer "John Nelson." Measuring 286 feet in length and rated at 952 tons, the "William Cook" was propelled through the water by a vertical beam engine with a cylinder diameter of 56 inches with a 12-foot stroke.

The "William Cook" was constructed to run in line with a sister steamboat named the "Richard Stockton" for the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company for service on the Long Branch and New York route, and was a speedy craft. She plied this route for several years and holds the distinction of being the last passenger vessel in service between these two points, making one trip per day in conjunction with a way train until July, 1872, when she was laid up.

The year 1874 marks the entrance of the "William Cook" into the steamboat history of Rondout, as it was in that year that Thomas Cornell of Rondout purchased the steamer. Just what the "William Cook" was used for during the next three years is uncertain, but in 1877 she was placed in service on a new route between Rondout and New York.

This new service was known as an express milk route, receiving milk from the Catskill Mountains and Rondout Valley via the Ulster and Delaware and Wallkill Valley Railroads, both owned by Thomas Cornell. The "William Cook" would leave Rondout with her cargo of milk at eight o'clock in the evening and arrive in New York about three o'clock in the morning, where the milk was delivered and empty cans loaded for the return trip up the Hudson river. During her sojourn on this route in milk service, the "William Cook" traveled more miles than any other steamboat on the river, averaging fourteen hundred miles per week.

One notable thing about the "William Cook" was the arrangement of her smokestacks—set fore and aft of the walking beam. Previous to this period only two steamboats on the Hudson river, the "Diamond," a blockade runner captured from the Confederates and purchased by the Knickerbocker Ice Company from the Federal government after the Civil War, and the "Berkshire," which ran from Hudson to New York and was destroyed by fire in 1864, carried their stacks in the same manner as the "William Cook."

While carrying the milk to the metropolis, the "William Cook" was captained by George Gage, with Ed Youngs as pilot and Isaac Van Valkenberg as chief engineer.

In the fall of 1879 the milk route was abandoned and during the summer season of 1880 the "William Cook" was used as an excursion steamer around New York harbor. The excursion business did not prove to be a paying proposition so the steamboat was returned to Rondout and later berthed at Port Ewen. In 1881 she was found to be unfit for service and she was sold and broken up by Daniel Bigler. In Mr. Murdock's collection of steamboat relics the engine room clock of the ones proud "William Cook" remains as a reminder of another old familiar Hudson river steamboat that sailed out of the Rondout creek in days gone by.

New Paltz Fiscal Affairs Scored By State Report

Albany, Sept. 27.—(Special)—Some irregularities in the conduct of fiscal affairs of the town of New Paltz, Ulster county, during the period from January 1, 1936, to July 31, 1937, are disclosed in the latest report of examination of this town's finances by members of the staff of State Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine.

A summary of the report has been prepared by the bureau of municipal accounts, and copies have been farwarded to local officials for their future guidance. The summary contains the following:

"The examiners call attention to the fact that the town clerk failed to provide the proper sign indicating the location of his office.

"The attention of one of the justices of the peace was called to the fact that he had delayed the transmission of fines imposed and collected by him until the end of the fiscal year, whereas such fines should be transmitted within 10 days after their receipt.

"The examiners call attention to the fact that all payments made by the supervisor to pay audited claims should be predicated on a warrant drawn by the town clerk.

"It appears that it has been the practice in this town to appropriate a lump sum annually for the American Legion. The examiners did not ascertain the purposes for which appropriations were used. The statute relating thereto was cited and the suggestion is made that hereafter the town board follow the provisions of the statute in this relation."

A detailed examination of the claims audited and allowed indicated some failure to properly itemize claims and attach subvouchers thereto whenever necessary. Specific illustrations of these oversights are contained in the report.

"It was noted that the town board had overlooked the fact that the compensation of the town clerk in payment for services rendered in highway and election matters should be fixed in a lump sum and that no claims on a daily or fee basis should be submitted.

"Section 104 of the town law seems to have been disregarded in many respects as several payments had been made on contracts in which town officers had an interest either direct or indirect. The examiners have prepared this information in schedule form and cited the law which has been violated.

"It appears that the town board had audited claims of the registrar of vital statistics and paid the same out of town funds whereas they constitute an obligation of the village of New Paltz. This matter was brought to the attention of the registrar and immediate restitution ensued.

"The supervisor had included in his claim for compensation for the year 1935 certain items which were covered by his annual allowance in highway matters.

"Attention of the town clerk was called to the fact that some minor charges for services had been made in relation to calling meetings of the town board which do not constitute legal charges against the town in the manner presented.

"In allowing claims for mileage submitted by one of the constables the town board had overlooked the fact that No. 740-b of the code of criminal procedure had been amended whereby the rate had been reduced from 15 cents to 8 cents. This resulted in an overpayment of $107.80 to one of the constables.

"It appears that it had been the practice to employ two persons each year to inspect voting machines. This is a duty devolving upon the inspectors of election. It also appears that an overpayment had been made to the inspectors of election for 'filing returns.'

"Some minor charges submitted by the health officer and school director had been audited and paid in the absence of statutory authority therefor."

Goldbeaters' Skin Made From Cattle's Intestine

Goldbeaters' skin is a fine membrane made of the outer coat of the intestine of cattle and is used by goldbeaters to separate the leaves of metal during the last and most difficult stages of hammering out goldleaf. The intestine, after being put through several processes, is cut into pieces about five inches square. Its tenacity and powers of resistance are so great that it will resist the continuous pounding of a heavy hammer for several months.

Goldbeaters do their work by hand as they did in ancient times, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News. A large number of leaves are beaten at the same time and hammers ranging in weight from seven to twenty pounds are used.

Gold is the most malleable of all metals and the minimum thickness to which it can be beaten with patience and skill is not known for certain. A single grain of gold has been beaten into a leaf having an area of 75 square inches and a thickness of less than 1-282,000 of an inch. Commercial goldleaf ranges from 1-200,000 to 1-250,000 of an inch in thickness.

Y.M.C.A. Leaders Set Up Program

"Pioneering in the uncharted Areas of Human Living" was the slogan adopted by the delegates at the Third Annual Setting Up Conference of the Central Y. M. C. A. of Kingston which was held at the Y. M. C. A. Camp at Glasco Sunday afternoon.

President Clarence Dumm welcomed the assembly to this important meeting of the year at which time the programs of the various departments were discussed. President Dumm, as the presiding officer, introduced the Rev. Clarance E. Brown, pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church, who was in charge of the devotional part of the program. "You are to be congratulated on your willingness to meet here to talk over the ways in which the character development program of the Kingston Y. M. C. A. may be strengthened," said the Rev. Mr. Brown. "There never was a time when there was greater need for leadership and sympathetic understanding on the part of the adults as they endeavor to pilot the young people through these difficult times.

"We all know that the Y. M. C. A. has been a great pioneering influence and has from time to time sought new fields when the present program had been adopted by other agencies. There still are new frontiers to conquer in making the world about us a better place to live. Changing conditions have made it necessary for the Y. M. C. A. to change its methods in order to render the most satisfactory service. There is nothing more gratifying than to give some of your time to help some boy or girl to have a more abundant life. My hope is that the Kingston Y. M. C. A. will have the greatest year in point of service in its history. I am sure all of us here assembled will do our part."

The delegates voted to transfer the conference next year to the Y. M. C. A. building with the meeting following supper on Monday evening the middle part of September. It was also voted that the delegates, board of directors, committeemen, clubs and members be invited to the Fall Program Planning Conference.

Secretary Sisson reported that a schedule was being prepared for the guest nights at the Y. M. C. A. Industries, and mercantile establishments will have the privilege on certain Saturday nights of using the numerous activities as guests of the Y. M. C. A.

Clarence Rowland, C. S. Treadwell and others thanked all who made the past success possible. Plans are under way for special lobby programs and hobby interest groups.

Following the special committee meeting reports were made by H. L. Winters, E. Bookwalter and Clarence Dumm of the findings of the meetings.

A buffet supper was served by a committee headed by Mrs. Robert L. Sisson of the wives of the "Y" staff and the Ladies' Auxiliary. Among those who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dumm, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rowland, the Rev. and Mrs. Clarance Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henke, Miss M. Treadwell, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. No Civil Cases Heard Monday

There were no civil matters ready Monday afternoon when court reconvened and County Judge Traver adjourned the term until October 17, when criminal matters will come before the court. There will be no October term of Supreme Court. When county court convenes at 2 o'clock on October 17 there will be a final call of civil matters and attorneys will be given a final opportunity of trying civil cases when the criminal cases have been disposed of.

The jurors, excused until the adjourned date, were expected to be required for a will contest matter this week but because of the necessity of a commission taking testimony of Dr. Raymond Crispell at Duke University that matter has been postponed. The commission will take the testimony and the matter will come up later before Surrogate Kaufman.

Kenneth Evans, who was given a year in jail and later had the sentence suspended on his promise to pay something toward the support of his family, was brought in court. Since he has been on probation he has paid nothing. Judge Traver directed he pay $6 a week or be returned to jail. The money is to be paid to the Ulster County Children's agent, Miss Doremus.

Sees Opportunities In Ulster County

Ruby, N. Y.
September 22, 1938

Editor, The Freeman:

For several weeks I have been visiting in the neighborhood where I was born July 4, 1870. I was baptized in the Dutch Reformed Church at Glasco and bear the name of the officiating minister, the Rev. William B. Merritt. Father took his family to Kansas and settled near Topeka in 1877. Since then I have lived in New Jersey, Michigan, New Mexico, Wyoming, both ends of California, Oregon and Alaska. Possibly your readers will be interested in a few items.

Searching the Plattekill Cemetery, I have found the graves of 61 persons born to the name of Carle, all relatives of mine. Possible it is good for the world that they are under the sod instead of above it. But of my own father who is buried at Topeka I once heard him spoken as "The man who knows God." That may have been equally applicable to many others of the name; I know not.

But as I studied records on tombstones I made one observation which your readers ought to be told unless they know it already. Bluestone is the most enduring stone there. I found one stone which has stood 130 years and the writing on it is as clear as when it was cut. The stone is still perfect. This should be made known widely as you have the stone to supply a large demand. I did not find one bluestone that showed the effects of "the gnawing tooth of time." Every old marble did show it, and even the "enduring granite," as it is called, though no stone there is old some have already begun to show the "tooth."

By the way if the reader will look through the cemetery behind the Brink residence he will have some "grave" thoughts of a new kind, possibly, if he asks himself this question, "Who will keep my grave green 1,000 years after I am dead?" That question shot itself at me 44 years ago from an old cemetery at Princeton, N. J. If anyone has doubts how to answer it let him go to the brush ground cemetery at Glasco and read on the big monument right at the entrance the inscription for his own tombstone: "Gone and long forgotten."

My second item is this: The uncultivated fields around here are full of "pesky" goldenrod. Pesky, did I say? My daughter grows it in her garden in Oregon; Kansas has it for her state emblem, and if any reader thinks he knows a more beautiful flower, one which will stay lovely for an equal length of time after it is out, let him write to this paper and define "beauty." The orchid is a pest in some places I am told. The "snow on the mountains" in your gardens we cut down as a weed in Oregon. Which one of your readers will take this despised gold now waving in your fields and change it into the equivalent of the more solid gold which our President has treated with equal contempt. A good living, possibly a fortune, awaits some one who grasps the opportunity, for goldenrod does not grow on the streets of our cities.

My third item is: Your wooded hills offer an ideal pasture for the production of mohair, at least such is my judgment. The natural food of the Angora goat is brush. You have brush in almost unlimited quantities. And I am told you do not have the peaky coyote, the goat raiser's great enemy in most of the west. I have had some experience with Angoras, but had to keep them inside a coyote-proof fence, and in Oregon we had no rain, usually, from April 1 to October. That did not favor growth of low brush. You have the low brush. Opportunity? Who will seize it? Difficulties? Certainly. Every worthwhile effort has met them.

Respectfully,
Wm. M. CARLE.

The Mohican Store Numbered Among 'Flood' Sufferers

Manager Trowbridge of the Mohican store on John street found that he had a little flood of his own on his hands Sunday afternoon when he came down to the store and saw water running out on to the side walk from beneath the store windows. Opening up he discovered that the floor of the store was covered with water to the depth of a couple of inches or so.

Investigation showed that a large hot water tank in the bakery on the upper floor had sprung a leak, some time after closing hours Saturday night and the water was pouring down through numerous places in the ceiling to the store below.

Outside of the damage to the tank and the floors and ceiling, damage to stock was confined mostly to a number of cartons of cakes which stood on the store floor.

Hitler Speech 'Moderate'

Rome, Sept. 27 (AP)—High Fascists today stressed that they considered Chancellor Hitler's speech moderate and saw therein a hope that war might be avoided. Il Messagero declared editorially that the speech was "exemplary of modification and in every way was in conformity with the ideal of nationality, which is an irrevocable fact in the European conscience."

Church Observes Date of Founding

Stone Ridge, Sept. 26—Members of the Marbletown Reformed Dutch Church of this village observed its 200th anniversary with a special program which opened Friday evening with a pageant and closed Sunday with a special service. The pageant was also given on Saturday evening.

The speaking program included addresses of Dr Lewis B. Sebring, Jr., an editor of the New York Herald Tribune, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck of Kingston and a sermon by the Rev. Harold Hoffman pastor of the church.

The pageant, which touched upon the early history of Marbletown, including that which related directly to the church was written by Miss Mildred Roosa, a member of the congregation

Costumes of the 45 members of the cast were of the style of the early Dutch settlers to the period of 1852 when the church was dedicated. The pageant closed with the singing of an anniversary hymn, written by Edwin Thomas Whiffen, who attends the church.

On Friday evening several former pastors were present and each gave a short talk on their pastorate at Stone Ridge Reformed Dutch Church. Those present were the Rev C N. Stevens of Bedminster, N. J, the Rev. Frank A. Langwith of Middlebush, N. J, and the Rev Cornelius Van Tol of Beacon The Rev. Everett McNair, who is assistant pastor at Congregational Church in White Plains and studying at Columbus University for his Ph D, spoke on the pastorate of his father, the Rev. Wilmer McNair, who served the Stone Ridge charge from 1901 to 1904

A letter was read from Mrs William Schomp, whose husband was pastor 50 years ago

Mrs George Davis of Youngstown, O., spoke on the work of the church during the pastorate of the church of her husband from 1894 to 1901.

Dr. Sebring, who is a great, great, great grandson of the Rev. Dirck Romeyn, pastor of the Marbletown Church from 1764 to 1776 spoke on the life of the pastor and Judge Hasbrouck, who is president of the Ulster County Historical Society, reviewed the history of Marbletown.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—In your studies amid the more curious of Manhattan's fauna you must not overlook the chorus girl For she is unique And, as a class, no contemporary appraisal of New York would be complete without her.

Usually she comes from a small town. She shares an apartment with one, or two, or three other girls, thus minimizing the rent and providing a measure of companionship. She rises about noon, breakfasts on a cracker and a ripe olive, and wanders off to the theater for an afternoon performance or rehearsal.

Her income is about $35 a week. If she works in a nightclub she reports about 6 p. m. and is off about 2 a m. In years she ranges between 16 and 22, and she would not be averse to winning (a) a wealthy husband, (b) an opportunity to become a star on Broadway. Now pull yourself together while I introduce some of them to you:

SANDRA is the tall, statuesque type who loves to stare tragically into space, her mind a blank. She adores the movies and insists her boy friends take her there. Once in the theater she screams and sobs. Often she faints. For Sandra is tender-hearted and can not stand for the hero to be victimized or the heroine to be deprived of her knight. All of Sandra's boy friends are new ones. The old ones never come back.

Flo, before she became a clothes-horse in a nightclub, gained most of her education by reading movie magazines She is the round-eyed, baby doll type but wishes she had a husky voice like Garbo.

JOY is one of those ambitious brunette pretties who wants to improve herself. So she reads books. She hasn't the slightest idea what they are about, but she reads them. Her idea of a good book is one with a pretty cover. The one she is carrying this week on subway rides between her apartment on 90th street and Times Square is "Reciprocal Trade Agreements with Latin America." The word "Latin" in the title is what sold her on the book. She thought it had something to do with Valentino and the tango.

Jean will probably go further than any of the lasses identified here. Her ambition is to become a kindergarten teacher and she is studying to that end. She got the idea while watching children at play in the park one Sunday afternoon. Since her thoughts do not include the theater, Jean will probably become a great actress. Things so frequently turn out that way.

Delaplane in Limelight As Early Cabinet Maker

Certain names stand out among American cabinet makers—Savery in Philadelphia, McIntire in Massachusetts, Goddard in Rhode Island and Duncan Phyfe in New York. But Phyfe worked late in the Eighteenth century and into the first three decades of the Nineteenth, and it is reasonable to suppose that a wealthy city like New York had cabinet makers of ability during the earlier part of the Eighteenth century since records show that comparatively little furniture was imported, observes a writer in the New York Herald Tribune.

Early records of New York disclose interesting facts about Joshua Delaplane, a cabinet maker who was born in 1690 and died in 1771 and who made furniture for many of the first families of New York. He was one of the earliest cabinet makers whose records show that he worked extensively in mahogany. In 1734 he made a mahogany dressing table for £2, in 1739 a mahogany triangle table for £3, and in 1737 a mahogany chest for £11, 10s.

Table making was apparently his specialty and his records show a wide variety of tables rafiging from such simple pieces as an ironing table in 1740 for which he charged 9s, to a mahogany dining table made in 1752 which cost £8, 10s and was 5 feet 3 inches in length and had eight legs and two drawers.

Hollywood
Sights And Sounds
By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—It's terrible the way most of the uncertainty is being taken out of my life.

Six nights a week, for instance, I know that the doorbell is going to ring. About 10:30. And I'm going to answer it and the man is going to say, "Well, here I am again."

And I say, "So you are," and he gives me the envelope and we both chuckle a bit, like the old friends we are by now. Maybe he says, "Nice evening," and maybe I say, "Yeah, lookit that moon," and he says, "Well, good night," and goes chug-chug down the street to take the uncertainty out of other lives kindred to mine.

He hasn't missed yet. If we happen to be out looking at a movie, or sleeping through one, or just out at a movie, it's there when we come in That envelope. "Today at Warner's."

THE contents tell all that the next day holds. At Warner's anyway. Well, practically all. Well, something. Well—

Today, for instance, when the mercury is higher than Jeanette MacD's best note and I wouldn't go near the Warner oven unless I thought Joan Blondell was going to sock Errol Flynn or all the Dead End kids were going to get the spanking they need—today he has it doped like this:

"Unfit to Print"—Joan Blondell Warned Against Mob "Finger"—Having brought in biggest scoop of past ten years, Joan is warned by co-reporter Pat O'Brien that the mob will get her if she doesn't watch out. Pat is worried about the sob sister he married yesterday, the same Joan Blondell.

"WINGS OF THE NAVY"—Bomb Derelict Ship in Pacific—John Payne, after receiving final instructions from Victor Jory, takes bomber up on mass flight to Honolulu. Target practice en route. Payne spies derelict ship and bombs it to bottom of Pacific. (You mean the Warner tank, mister?)

"Torchy Blane in Chinatown"—In and Out of Submarines All Day—Latest in Torchy series movies into submarine set today with Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane and Tom Kennedy in quest of clues.

"They Made Me a Criminal" (Whittier, Calif.)—Garfield Loves Dickson—On ride to water tank in antique jaloppy, John Garfield declares his love for Gloria Dickson and willingness to turn over a new leaf. He sees she is receptive so he follows up advantage. After lunch he will be pulled out of irrigation tank into which he dived to save Dead End kids last week at Indio. (Yeah, that's right—it's the movies.)

Elderly relative — Remember, my boy, that wealth does not bring happiness.

Young Man—I don't expect it to, I merely want it so that I shall be able to choose the kind of misery that is most agreeable to me.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Spirited Spirits

Elkton, Md —When a truck overturned and burst into flames, passers-by obligingly helped the driver remove the cargo—40 cases of liquor

After the fire was extinguished, the driver turned to thank his helpers They were gone So were the 40 cases of liquor.

Pleasant Penalty

Muncie, Ind —A boy pledged to a central high school club was ordered as part of his initiation to kiss every girl who passed through the entrance to the school building

He kissed one girl so fervently he broke her glasses Now the club has to buy her a new pair.

But—Self Sympathy

Sacramento, Calif. — Justice Percy G. West was all sympathy as a woman suing for return of money she paid for a permanent wave told her woes

"Now, your honor," said Alice Conley, combing her shoulder length hair with her fingers, "would you pay $7 50 for a wave like this?"

"Young woman," replied the judge, fingering his bald pate, "I'd pay $100 if I could get a wave like that."

Too Hot to Swing

Clinton, Mo.—Work on the shelter house at the city cemetery "will be resumed when it's cooler," Sexton L. D. Kimmell announces.

Kimmell and a crew of workmen went out to swing hammers, fled when a swarm of objectors "put on the heat."

The objectors—wasps who tenanted the shelter house roof.

Recent amendments to the Federal duck hunting regulations make allowances for "mistaken identity" in shooting prohibited species like redheads, canvasbacks, bufflecheads and ruddy ducks.

Everyone of us believes he has a hard time. We once knew a man who had absolutely loafed on his job, for two or three months, to go in and resign He said he's stood the knocking because he didn't work just as long as he could.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Two Clubs Have Meetings Monday

Twentieth Century Club opened its season Monday at the home of the president, Mrs. Elmer Van Tassell, 27 Washington avenue. In the absence of Mrs. E. O. Allen, Mrs. Harry B. Walker answered to the roll call with an article on "California" and Miss Mary H. Ingalls answered with an article on "Oregon."

The first paper on the year's study of "The Bible as Literature" was read by Miss Mary K. Husted, who discussed "The Origin of the Bible." The second paper, read by Miss Ella Bernard, "The Growth of the Bible" pointed out the fact that the early writers were not bothered by the lack of documentary evidence. It was enough that the story had been passed on by word of mouth and put into immortal words by their father's confessions. Both papers showed careful preparation and were well read.

The Twentieth Century Club will hold its next meeting October 10 at the home of Mrs. S. M. Taylor, 46 Fairmont avenue.

Olympian Club

The second meeting of the season of Olympian Club was held Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Jean Karnaghan, 276 Pearl street. Three papers were read to the group. The first was a "Kaleidoscopic View of History" in reference to Asia Minor, the year's subject chosen for study by the members. This paper was read by Miss Marguerite Cordes.

The second paper was a discussion of the caravan routes and the development of commerce by Mrs. James J. Murphy, Jr., and the third was on the "Bagdad Railway," read by Miss Irene Goodsell.

The roll call Monday evening was unusual in that each member took her initial and gave a description of a geographical factor which started with that initial.

The next meeting will be held October 3 at the home of Mrs. Lester Decker, 17 Mountain View avenue.

Maier-Thompson

Miss Hazel Mae Thompson of West Shokan and Marcel Charles Maier of Glenford were united in marriage by the Rev. Arnold Bellows at his home in West Hurley on Saturday evening. They were attended by the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frances Whispell of West Shokan.

Winter Courses Now Open

Registration is still open for the winter courses being given in the city under the sponsorship of New York University. Classes started last week with registration by the pupils but announcement has been made that the registration privilege will be kept open for another week or two. Courses being offered this term are "Guidance and the Classroom Teacher," by Dr. Orlie M. Clem, Wednesday afternoons at 4:15 at the high school, and "Juvenile Delinquency and Crime Prevention," by Dr. Joseph Roucek, Thursday evenings at 7:15 o'clock, in the Kingston City Library.

Honored on Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. George Fay were given a party Saturday evening in honor of their 11th wedding anniversary at their summer cottage at Lake Katrine. A turkey dinner was served at midnight. During the evening a program was given by Mike Buckley and Molly Fay, who gave an exhibition of the turkey trot; Mame Volker, George Quigley, Estelle Haber and Len Deshler, who did the Big Apple. Margaret Deshler, Lena Post, Frances Buckley and Mike Fay sang a quartet. The grand march was led by Esther Van Etten and Edward Buckley. "My Wild Irish Rose" was sung by John J. Post. During the wedding march, played by Elias Meyers and his rhythm boys, Edward Buckley and Esther Van Etten announced their engagement. Guests present included Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fay and daughter, Patricia and Jane Buckley of New York city, Estelle Haber of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. John Delanor of Syracuse, Mr. and Mrs. William McNamee of Albany, Mr. and Mrs. John Post, Esther Van Etten of Saugerties, Mr. and Mrs. George Quigley, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Meyers of Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Len Deshler, Glasco, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Buckley and daughters, Mary and Catherine, Edward Buckley, Mame Volker, Mr. and Mrs. George Fay and daughter, Ella, of East Kingston.

Paul M. Young, Jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Paul M. Young, of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and a member of the 1938 graduating class of Kingston High School, has entered Gettysburg College to prepare for the ministry. He is the first boy from the congregation to choose this calling. At the church service on Sunday the congregation presented Mr. Young with a red letter Bible and concordance. He was given a farewell party Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman La Tour, 299 Hasbrouck avenue, at which time the young people of the church presented him with a military set.

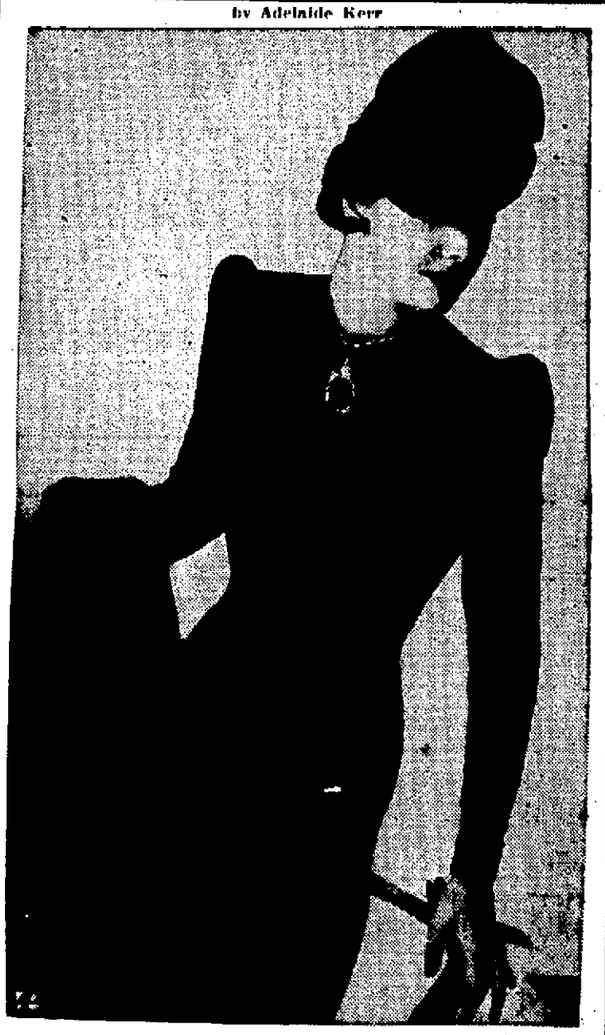
MODES of the MOMENT

by Adelaide Kerr



Rich blue mat velvet and a suave design combine to make this a practical afternoon frock which fits the 1938 picture. Notice its high neckline, raised shoulders and small waist. A gold and "onyx" Victorian cameo locket and little gold bowknot earrings etched in black add the jeweled accents which are smart this fall.

Religious Education

II. GROWTH OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS IN AMERICA

By Gordon A. Riegler

Sporadically in various sections of the country, Sunday Schools were formed prior to 1824—such organizations being the result of local initiative. But in that year a movement was set in operation culminating in the formation of the American Sunday School Union, an interdenominational body. By 1829, this society determined to establish a Sunday School in every western community where there was none.

The importance of this decision cannot be overestimated. In pre-Revolutionary days the westward tides of population began flowing; economic depressions gave impetus to this western march; frontiersmen were poor and overburdened with tasks of clearing the land and building their homes. Without the help of their eastern friends and relatives, there was no hope for religious and educational institutions.

Augmenting the American Sunday School Union were such bodies as the American Home Missionary Society, also operating on an interdenominational basis, formed in 1826, which sent hundreds of missionaries into the frontier communities. These men aided in the founding of Sunday Schools.

Frequently churches and individuals in the east provided the funds for the purchase of Sunday School libraries. The American Tract Society, the Methodist Book Concern and other organizations provided an abundance of literature distributed by the missionaries and colporteurs.

Trustworthy figures to indicate the progress of the Sunday school movement from its inception to comparatively recent times are not available. It is only since the latter part of the 19th century that anything like accurate records of most denominations have been kept.

In 1830, there were nearly ten million persons in the United States, and there were perhaps fewer than two million of them affiliated with the churches. A few years later the famed Lyman Beecher, father of the more distinguished Henry Ward, complained that of all the students at Yale, not one was a church member—an unthinkable condition in our own day. The Baptists (all branches) in 1800 had about 100,000 members, and in 1926 they had more than eight million. Census studies reveal that the growth of the religious population in America has more than kept pace with the expansion of the entire population.

Reports indicate that in 1899, there were in the United States 139,481 Sunday Schools with 1,417,580 officers and teachers, and a total enrollment of 12,891,821. By 1926, or in a period of 27 years, enrollment had grown to more than 21,000,000. The entire population of America during this same period increased about 17 per cent, and the Sunday school population expanded nearly 75 per cent.

Two notes of warning emerge from the history of the expansion of the Sunday schools, and other religious institutions: (1) Today, the Sunday schools enroll less than 50 per cent as many members as there are constituents in all the churches, with the result they will furnish fewer church members, and thus an inevitable shrinkage in the size of the churches. (2) No community, no nation, no civilization can rise above its religious levels. Healthy, thriving church schools produce a healthy, thriving community and nation.

Cahill Issues Statement About Morrello's Case

At the preliminary hearing Monday before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in city court in the matter of John Morrello, charged with abduction, Judge Cahill said: "The case was not the question of finding whether he was guilty or innocent, but whether there was sufficient evidence to warrant holding him for grand jury action."

Judge Cahill said further: "The testimony taken at the hearing disclosed that any crime that could have been committed, was committed outside the limits of the city of Kingston, and the city court only has jurisdiction of cases occuring inside the city limits.

"Other proceedings, if any further are contemplated in the case will have to be instituted in the town in which the alleged crime was committed.

"I dismissed the case at the close of the hearing, holding that there had not been sufficient evidence submitted to show that the alleged crime had been committed within the limits of the city. As the court had no jurisdiction of any crime alleged to have been committed outside the city limits, the case Monday against Morrello was dismissed."

Morrello was arrested several days ago on complaint of Miss Jennie Wolf of 182 West Pierpont street. The girl told the police that Morrello instead of giving her a promised ride to her home, took her to Glasco, where she said he struck her in the jaw and manhandled her before he assaulted her.

Traffic Now Uses Highland Road

Two strips of the new concrete pavement from the Mid-Hudson bridge circle across the new Highland viaduct northerly are now being used by traffic after working hours. The extreme northerly end of the new pavement is open the full four widths.

During working hours, however, traffic is being detoured around the lower end in order that work may be hastened by the contractors.

By October 6, when a celebration for the opening of the Highland road and the Kingston-West Hurley road will be held, it is expected the four lanes will be opened for the entire length. Opening of the viaduct eliminates the necessity of through traffic passing through the business section of Highland village.

Men's Clubs Hold Busy Session at 'Y'

At the meeting of representatives of Men's Clubs comprising the Federation of Mens' Club, the new president, William S. Jenkins presiding, it was voted to start activities in the dartball league during the second week in October. All clubs are asked to notify Edsall P. Flowers, secretary of the Federation, whether or not their club will enter a team in the league.

William C. Newkirk, reported that the softball season was at an end and the Fair Street Reformed Church had won the pennant. On motion it was decided that the Fair Street Reformed Church should put on the softball dinner and that the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church put on the entertainment. A committee composed of Ted Young, William Newkirk and Chester Weeks was named.

It was decided that the dartball games should be on a scheduled basis providing for one round only, clubs visiting each other once, with a play-off between first and second place clubs. A proposition that all dartball boards should be standard, similar to those used in Newburgh and all to be made by Mr. Reil, was defeated.

Harry Gray, William Reil and Al Reese, committee that conferred with the mayor in the matter and secured the playing fields, balls, etc., for the softball games, were given a rising vote of thanks for their work.

The Fair Street Reformed Church club invited all members to visit them on October 19, at which time Frederic Snyder will visit the club and make an address.

Each club in the Federation was asked to have four other clubs as their visitors during the year and it was requested that all visitations be reported to the secretary for tabulation.

It was decided that clubs forfeiting games be assessed, beginning at the third game and being retroactive—also that the rule be enforced.

The meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. and was the regular meeting for discussing fall and winter activities.

Young Winfield Gave Rescue Aid

Holt N. Winfield, Jr., son of Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Holt N. Winfield of Ulster Park, who is a sophomore at Rhode Island State College, Kingston, R. I., home while the college is temporarily closed, had some thrilling first-hand experience with the flood that took so many lives in the Long Island Sound country, it was learned today.

Young Winfield was among the volunteers that helped in the rescue work at Watch Hill and Westerly, resort towns along the Sound that were so severely hit. He assisted in digging out some 30 bodies from the mud and debris and taking them to nearby barns and other buildings that had been turned into temporary morgues. He also was among those that helped when the storm struck the college buildings and when the slate roof was blown off and every window in the girls' dormitory was blown out.

Holt came home Sunday as the college is shut down until repairs can be made, electric light and power being entirely out of commission. He expects to return to Rhode Island Thursday.

Two very successful summer camps have been conducted this year by the Ohio State Grange.

Pirates Still Are Favorites —Note on Southwest Conference

By Joe Kelly

Eddie Brietz, of The Associated Press, says: "This week tells the story in the National League.... Cubs against Pirates in a three-game series starting today.... Pirates still remain the favorites, although thousands are pulling for the Cubs.... You can't lose sight of the fact that the Bucs have been on top of a hectic race since July 13 and that's a real test in any man's league.... Besides that, they have one of the best balanced clubs in either major league.... On the other hand the Cubs are coming along under the inspiring leadership of Old Gabby Hartnett and they have two red hot pitchers right now in Bill Lee and Clay Bryant.... Anything can happen, brothers.

"Mid-west fans don't like the attention this column pays to the southwest conference and one bird (who doesn't bother to sign his name) points out that Rice, which won the championship down there, was beaten by Oklahoma, which was not champion of the Big Six.... Six former South Bend, Ind., High School players were members of this year's Western All-Stars, which may, or may not be something of a record.

"We'll go on record as predicting the Yanks will take either the Cubs or the Pirates in five games.... Sol Goldberg, pepper of the famous Marshall, has sold his picture show in Elkins, W. Va., so he can follow Pitt on the road.... (He had to go to the opposition home to see the newsreels, anyway).... Note to Jimmy Garnett, Sarasota, Fla.: Doc Williamson, the football expert, likes Texas Tech and Auburn.... There is no change in plans for a big shake-up on the Giants.... Only a hare half dozen are sure of their jobs next year.... If George McAfee hadn't gone on the shelf, Duke would have had the best backfield in the south in McAfee, Eric Tipton, Irish O'Mara and Bob Spangler."

Dream Tourney Turning Rapidly Into Nightmare

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP)—The "Westchester 108," which started out as a "dream tournament," has turned into a nightmare.

As it headed into its final 36 holes today at the Fenway Golf Club, this $13,500 open golf competition had failed to live up to any of its promises except possibly that of close rivalry.

On Saturday and Sunday it attracted thousands of persons but hardly any of them paid. Yesterday, as Billy Burke of Cleveland remained on top of the heap, the play didn't even attract enough people.

To liven up the competition, circles were drawn around three holes and it was announced prizes would be awarded to those putting their tee shots within the circles. But the circles were so small that only four players have been within them in the last three rounds. One of the four got a hole-in-one.

In approximately 585 18-hole rounds played by some of the game's greatest stars — Sam Snead, Ralph Guldahl, Paul Runyan, Harry Cooper, Jug McSpaden, Denny Shute, Jimmy Hines, to mention only a handful—there have been exactly six sub-par rounds. The best the boys could produce in yesterday's 36-hole stretch was four par 70s.

The players don't hesitate to name the difficulty.

"The greens," said one of the leaders, "are down-right lousy. You can't be sure of sinking even a 12-inch putt. After two rounds, you either get so jittery you can't do anything right or so disgusted that you don't care if you do or not."

With the regulation open tournament's 72 holes completed and 36 holes to play today, Snead remained the gallery choice. Sluggin' Sam started this morning's fifth round only four strokes behind Burke, who had a 72-hole score of 286.

Runyan, McSpaden and Mike Turnesa had 288, Snead, Cooper and Chandler Harper 290, Hines 291; Johnny Revolta, Ed Dudley and El Oliver, 292, and Guldahl and Ben Hogan 293.

Name Fanny Means 'Free,' According to Authority

The name Fanny or Fannie is a diminutive of the Teutonic Frances and has the same meaning, "free." It is often an independent name, however. Other forms of it are the French Franchon, Franchette, "little free one," and Fania or Fanya, a Slavonic form, writes Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fanny Burney (1752-1840) English novelist, won fame in 1778 with her novel "Evelina," first to present society in a realistic manner. She married General D'Arblay, a French refugee.

Fanny Elssler (1810-1884), Austrian dancer, won laurels in Europe and America. Fanny Davenport (1850-1898) was a prominent actress of her day.

Fanny Crosby (1820-1915), blind from 6 weeks old, wrote 6,000 hymns, including "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." Her real name was Mrs. Frances Jane Van Alstyne.

Fanny Brough (1854-1914) was an English actress, niece of Lionel Brough. "Fanny Fern" was the pen name of Sara Payson Willis Parton, brilliant newspaper woman of the early 1800s, sister of Nathaniel P. Willis.

The Emancipation Proclamation

According to Bassett's History of the United States, President Abraham Lincoln read to his cabinet, on July 22, 1862, a tentative emancipation proclamation to apply to the seceding states. He justified such action on the ground of military necessity. Postmaster-General Blair objected, because he believed it would endanger the autumn elections and Secretary of State Seward suggested that nothing be done until the army won a victory, otherwise the proclamation might be construed as a confession of weakness. On September 17, 1862, Lee's invasion of Maryland was checked and on September 23 (Bassett gives September 22, but other sources give September 20) Lincoln issued the preliminary proclamation announcing that slaves would be declared free in all states resisting the Union on January 1, 1863. On that date the final proclamation was issued.

Hard to Figure Pirates - Cubs In the Series

By HUGH A. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

When you go back into the records, it becomes harder than ever to figure out what may happen in this Pirates-Cubs "peasant" series which is bound to make all other baseball take a back seat until it's over.

In the first place, neither has been able to gain a decisive edge in 19 previous encounters this season. The Pirates have a 10-9 lead so far and appear in a bit better shape.

On the other hand, the records don't prove it will help Pie Traynor much to be able to shoot Jim Tobin, Bob Klinger and Russ Bauers at the Cubs in order. They're his aces, but in ten starts against Chicago they have won only three games among them and lost five.

Gabby Hartnett, after tossing his No. 1 moundsman, Bill Lee, against the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday to gain a 6-3 victory that put the Cubs only a game and a half behind, decided to take a chance with Dizzy Dean for today's opener. Old Diz has faced the Bucs twice, winning one game with a seven-hit job and being knocked out to lose the other. Clay Bryant, with two wins and one loss and Lee, with four straight triumphs against Pittsburgh, are due to follow. But they'll be going in there with only two days rest apiece.

The winning and losing streaks of the rivals don't prove much, either. Since Aug. 9, when the Bucs held a 6½ game lead, Pittsburgh has won only half its 46 games and Chicago has won 30 out of 47.

In the only other game yesterday, the New York Yankees began tuning up for the World Series by conquering the second-place Boston Red Sox, 4-3.

SERIES STUFF!

Braves Made Amazing Climb; Pitcher Ruth Won A Marathon

By DILLON GRAHAM
AP Feature Service Writer

The Boston Braves under George Stallings, the miracle man, authored the most startling climb in baseball history in 1914 to win the National League pennant and shutout the A's in the World Series.

Deep in the cellar in early July, the Braves, a team that appeared mediocre in every spot save the keystone combination of Rabbit Maranville and Johnny Evers, suddenly started clicking, rushed to first place and fought off all opposition.

Then, in the Series, the Braves won four straight from the A's, a record that was to stand for more than a dozen years until the great Yankee machines of 1927-28-32 came along and duplicated the feat.

Taking a group consisting largely of castoffs from other major-league clubs, but owning a fine battery in Grover Cleveland Alexander and Bill Killifer and a great shortstop in Dave Bancroft, the Phillies under Pat Moran won the National League pennant in 1915 but were crushed, 4-1, by Boston in the playoff. After losing the first game to Alexander's crafty pitching, the Red Sox won four straight.

Ruth Wins Longest

A figure who was to become famous as the greatest slugger of all time stood out as a pitcher in the 1916 series when Boston beat Brooklyn 4-1. Babe Ruth southpawed his way to a 2-1 triumph in the longest series game on record, 14 innings. This also started Ruth toward another record, which he completed in 1918, that of 29 consecutive innings in which he allowed no runs. Brooklyn that year had such stars as Merkle, Chief Meyers, Rube Marquard, Casey Stengel and Jack Coombs.

With Urban Faber winning three games, the White Sox beat the Giants 4-2 in 1917, and the following year the Boston Red Sox again triumphed, whipping the Cubs 4-2. Boston was managed by Ed Barrow, later to be secretary and general manager of the Yankees. Ruth won two games for Boston.

The previous series were best four of seven games, but in 1919 it was increased to nine games, with five needed for a victory.

Ruth On The Mound

Pat Moran's Cincinnati Reds won the National League pennant and then surprised by beating a supposedly much stronger Chicago White Sox team under "Kid" Gleason, 5-3, in the Series.

The Black Sox

Later when Kenesaw M. Landis had become baseball commissioner there was a "leak" to the effect that the Series had been "thrown" by Chicago. The accused players were indicted in criminal litigation but were acquitted. However, Landis barred them from baseball.

Tris Speaker brought Cleveland its only World Series in 1920, the Indians beating Brooklyn 5-2 as Stanley Coveleski won three games. Bill Wambsganss, Cleveland third-baseman, made a triple play unassisted and Elmer Smith, Indian outfielder, hit a home run with the bases full. Tony Lazzeri of the Yankees was to turn this trick in the 1936 series.

Vince Sempervino and Mike Angieri, two of the classiest welterweights in the amateurs, return to the municipal auditorium Friday night to continue their feud of Asticuffs.

Sempervino, former Hawaiian champion, was given the nod over the New York ace in their battle two weeks ago, but the verdict put the fight crowd at the auditorium into an uproar.

Angieri was the choice of half the patrons, and they booed the official verdict. However, Sempervino, a local favorite, had his following as usual.

Incensed at the vote, Angieri bounced up and down on the canvas like a rubber ball, and let it be known that he thought he won. "They took that decision away from me," said the metropolitan scrapper, "but I can beat Sempervino in a return match."

The second meeting was arranged, but no definite date set. Yesterday word came from New York that Angieri was ready to go.

Sempervino is in New York, too. He signed up to train at Stillman's gym last Saturday, and is in tip-top shape for his man. Ray Arcel, famous trainer of scrappers, has been coaching Vince.

Carmine Fatta, seeking his sixth victory in a row, will come from Newburgh to box Frankie Ruffo, the Binghamton boy who eliminated none other than Georgie Coyle, Radio City usher, from the Golden Gloves.

Steve Kukol, national lightweight champ from Binghamton, is matched with Richard Cremar, the New Yorker who took the measure of Vince Sempervino at the auditorium a couple of months ago.

Ray Robinson, the metropolitan bantamweight who defeated Dom Perfetti last week, is down for five rounds with Harry LaSalle of Binghamton, the representative of Canada in the Olympics at Berlin.

Other bouts:

Jim Dennis, Binghamton, conqueror of Eddie Pagan, vs. Danny Cox, New York, who kayoed Cozy Storace.

Sammy Yerkes, Ellenville windmill, vs. Billy Kelliher, Albany.

Frankie Albright, Kingston, vs. Tommy Aposporos, Poughkeepsie Greek, in a return engagement to give Albright a chance to prove he is superior, although he dropped the decision last week.

This week's card promises to be one of the best ever presented at the auditorium, every boxer on it being rated among the cream of the amateur crop.

Dean Hartnett's Means to Flag

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs paid plenty for Dizzy Dean and expected plenty of victories in return, but Manager Gabby Hartnett was willing to settle for one today—the series opener against Pittsburgh's National League leaders.

Dean and his famous sore arm proved a gamble for the Cubs from the start. Today he was Hartnett's finesse to a championship.

If he wins, the Cubs would be a half game behind the pace setters and Hartnett would have his highest trumps—Clay Bryant and Bill Lee—to play against the Bucs tomorrow and Wednesday.

If he loses, the Cubs still would retain an outside chance. It was merely another gamble for Hartnett, who has called enough turns to bring the Cubs 17 of their last 20 games—seven of them in a row.

Ferrebee Heads For Another Round

Chicago Sept. 27 (AP)—J. Smith Ferrebee, Chicago marathon golfer, climbed wearily out of bed this morning and headed for Milwaukee and another round of golf.

He arrived in his special plane last night after finishing the first half of his transcontinental golf tour at St. Louis.

Ferrebee's goal is 600 holes of golf in four days and in eight cities.

He finished his round at St. Louis with the aid of flood lighted trucks, posting an 87 for the last 18 holes to boost his total to 332 strokes.

"Red" Dawson's Question Box

By LOWELL (RED) DAWSON

QUESTION: What is meant by "lateral," "spot," and "shovel" passes?

Answer: A lateral pass occurs when the ball is thrown in a lateral direction to another offensive man. It must be at an angle to your own goal line. And the spot pass is a pass thrown to a man who is elected to receive before the play starts. He is supposed to arrive at a certain position to receive. The shovel pass, sometimes called the submarine pass, occurs when the ball is thrown forward to another eligible ball carrier by a passer who is five or more yards behind the line of scrimmage. It is a very short pass, usually thrown to another back. It gets the name "shovel" because it is frequently thrown underhanded. But it may be thrown under or overhanded.

CUBS CLIMB WITHIN 1½ GAMES OF PIRATES

This was one of the sparkling Cub plays which enabled the Chicagoans to down the Cardinals, 6-3, and climb to within 1½ games of the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates. Stu Martin, Card second baseman, is out at second in the first half of a double play which also caught Bordagaray at first. Jurges of the Cubs is relaying the throw to first. Cubs next entertain the Pirates at Chicago in a series which probably will decide the race.
